Cornerstone laid April 2, 1832; finished 1835	Thomas U. Walter (1804-1884)
SIGNIFICANCE (ARCHITECTURAL AND HISTORICAL, INCLUDE ORIGINAL USE OF STRUCTURE)
One of the first major designs of the great American architect, Thomas U. Walter, FAIA, and an early use of the Pennsylvania system of solitary confinement for prisoners developed in the Philadelphia area during the early 19th century. The entire complex and all separate buildings were demolished in 1968.
STYLE (IF APPROPRIATE)
Castellated style, derived from English Gothic architecture.
MATERIAL OF CONSTRUCTION (INCLUDE STRUCTURAL SYSTEMS)
Front buildings: Quincy granite ashlar with rubble rear wall Two cell blocks: rubble with granite ashlar trim
SHAPE AND DIMENSIONS OF STRUCTURE (SKETCHED FLOOR PLANS ON SEPARATE PAGES ARE ACCEPTABLE)
Front buildings: approx. 173' (seventeen-bay front) X 36'; two and three stories Two cell blocks: each approx. 53' X 380'; three stories with clerestory skylights
EXTERIOR FEATURES OF NOTE
The complex consisted of a main block, two flanking wings with extending walls, and two rear prison cell blocks and a separate rear central structure. A central two-story octagonal battlemented tower occupied the center section of the main block. Two smaller, battlemented octagonal towers occupied the front corners of the wings. (continued on page 2)
INTERIOR FEATURES OF NOTE (DESCRIBE FLOOR PLANS, IF NOT SKETCHED)
Each cell, as originally built: 9' X 13' dimensions; arched opening; oak plank flooring; wooden door with iron material on the interior side; water closet with hydrant; assorted flues.

EXTERIOR FEATURES OF NOTE (continued from page 1):

There were also two battlemented bastions on the front corners of the extensions. The complex was further accentuated with two projecting corner turrets on the main block. Battlemented parapets gave the finishing touches for the front section of the complex. The windows on the front elevation of the main block had lancet arches and hood molds. The main doorways and other openings elsewhere also had lancet arches.

Early Views:

Lithograph of front elevation of the prison, printed ca. 1839 by P.S. Duval, in possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. A photocopy of it is included in the field record folder for this complex.

Castner's Disasters, Criminal Prisons, shows two views: "View of Moyamensing Prison, Philadelphia County, Pa." and "Moyamensing Prison", a lithograph by J.T. Bowen. Publication date of this book not known.
